PROF. PAUL OKEMO is a full professor of Microbiology at Kenyatta University, where he has lectured in various aspects of Microbiology for the last 25 years. During that period, he has specifically addressed areas in Medical Microbiology, Environmental, Food, Microbial physiology, Medical Virology, and microbial genetics among others. He has also lectured at other Universities in Kenya such as Jomo Kenyatta where he taught medical Microbiology, and medical Mycology, Masinde Muliro and Maseno. He has won several research grants and authored 77 Articles in refereed Journals, three book chapters, 22 Conference papers, and given talks at various fora in the area of Microbiology. He has successfully supervised 56 master’s students, and 3 PhDs. He is currently supervising 17 master’s and 6 PhD students.

AREA OF INTEREST: He has specialized in Pathogenic Microbiology and microbial resistance to drugs. He has worked for many years on new drug research particularly from Natural products. In this regard he has been a World Bank Consultant in looking for novel compounds from Natural products to fight microbial resistance.

SOME OF THE LATEST PUBLICATIONS IN AREA OF INTEREST (2010-2014)

